Lokman Hekim University International Art and Science Festival (IASF-2023)

Organized by Lokman Hekim University, the International Art and Science Festival (IASF-2023) brought together distinguished artists and prominent scholars who explore art and science in a joint fashion. As a health-oriented higher education institution, Lokman Hekim University has taken a significant step not only in pioneering advancements in science and education but also in contributing to the sociocultural life of society.

Embracing the added value of science and art in societal development, our university marked an important onset through this very festival. The motto of this year's event was selected as "Health for All, Art for All," under which various art workshops were organized, and scientific sessions concentrating on art and health were held.

The festival hosted university students and staff, along with the considerable attention of the wider public. The most distinctive feature of the festival was that all workshops, events, and exhibitions were open to the public.

A total of 20 artists participated in the festival, including 15 international artists from Argentina, Slovenia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Mexico, the USA, Malaysia, Wales, China, Romania, Ukraine, and Bulgaria. The artworks produced during the publicly accessible workshops were displayed in an exhibition at the end of the festival and were compiled into a digital catalog.

The festival successfully created a vibrant space through which diverse segments of the society got together and where both scientific and artistic expressions were exhibited and in which individuals interacted with each other.

I extend my sincere gratitude to all the artists, scholars, alongside the organizing team who contributed to the success of our festival.

Prof. Dr. Fatih GÜLTEKİN
Rector, Lokman Hekim University

The International Art and Science Festival (IASF-2023) hosted by Lokman Hekim University set out with the slogan "Health for All, Art for All" based on the universal message of the World Health Organization. In this context, our festival was successfully held with the participation of artists and scientists and the intense interest of the society, and an international exhibition was opened with the works donated by the participating artists to the collection of our university. The catalog prepared with the works of 20 artists was presented to the interest of the audience.

In the Science and Art Festival, there is an art that is "in the service of science" on the one hand and "inspired by science" on the other. The festival organized by Lokman Hekim University, which is a pioneer in health education and health services, also wants to pioneer in ensuring the cooperation of health science with national and international art. Our university aims to enrich the cultural and artistic infrastructure of our country and the university ecosystem, bring vitality to urban life, contribute to the development of culture and art policies, and break new ground in developing new discourses for health-art cooperation.

As Lokman Hekim University, this festival is important in terms of emphasizing that universities are in life and that social responsibility projects are as important as education and research functions. Especially in the post-pandemic period, an important goal has been realized in terms of bringing the importance of art and health cooperation to the agenda.

Dr. Mehmet ALTUĞ
Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Lokman Hekim University

A Message From Festival President

Lokman Hekim University (LHU) is proud to be a sponsor and host of the International Art& Science Festival, 2023 in Capital City Ankara.

One of the important missions of LHU, which is a health-themed university, is to contribute to social development of community. In this context, it implements sports, culture and art projects. IASF-2023 was initiated by LHU to contribute to the art field and to add a new project to the social investments of the university.

International Art& Science Festival's mission is to combine the art and science and bringing together artists and scientists. The idea of the project was born from the belief that social development will be realized with the contribution of science and art together, so that scientists and artists together will contribute to producing original ideas.

This first International Art&Science Festival organization thank you to all who helped make the festival possible. I would like to thank the Kupula Art Mexico group for their contribution as a partner of this festival. I would also like to thank the ArtDuoProject organization, which contributed to the realization of the organization.

The festival welcomes artists and scientists from different countries. In this context, 20 artists that 15 from foreign countries and five from Turkey and four speakers, one from the USA and three from different universities in Türkiye, take part in the scientific session titled "Art and Health Science".

One of the most important missions of the festival is to bring art and science with the community. For this reason, all events that will take place during the festival will be open to the public and free of charge. You can follow all the details and current announcements on our festival website and social media accounts.

As Darwin said about the significance of science and art in society "Science and art are like the two wings of a bird. Societies that can use both wings fly and become free. Those who cannot fly become chickens. Imagine what a chicken society can do..." We, as LHU, aim to strengthen these two wings of society through our festival.

Aiming to be a pioneer in science, LHU has shown us that it is also a candidate university to take responsibility in the art with this festival.

Sincerely

Belgin AKIN

Alejandro Teves

ARGENTINA

I am a plastic artist, contemporary painter, muralist, graffiti artist and visual arts teacher, I live in the province of Jujuy, in northwestern Argentina.

About my job,

Most of my work is composed of mixed media paintings on canvas. To make them I use various classical techniques such as drawing and oil and contemporary techniques such as graffiti, airbrushing and digital prints. These are the resources necessary to bring to this world the art that I have built inside of me.

My work shows social reality and ancestral customs. The fragility of nature and the coexistence with postmodern society is a constant struggle in my work. Show the world as I see it, in color and movement.

Art is my way of life and experiencing the visible and hidden world. Apart from painting and sculpture - my primary loves - I am also involved in poetry, artistic photography, music...

I believe that only a total commitment to one's love can produce quality fruit - creations. I love the creative process and art with all my heart - and I dedicate my life to it.

My artistic oeuvre includes over 400 creations, 30 sculptures, over 100 artistic photographs, over 1000 poems and 20 original compositions.

I have participated in numerous art colonies - both local and international.

After graduation, due to my academic success, I was invited by Arthouse - Collage of visual arts - to teach two courses (Colour Studies and Creative Drawing and Painting).

As a lecturer, I have been teaching at the school and leading studio work from 2014 - 2019. *My work and life have been the subject of a weekly program "Sweet Life".

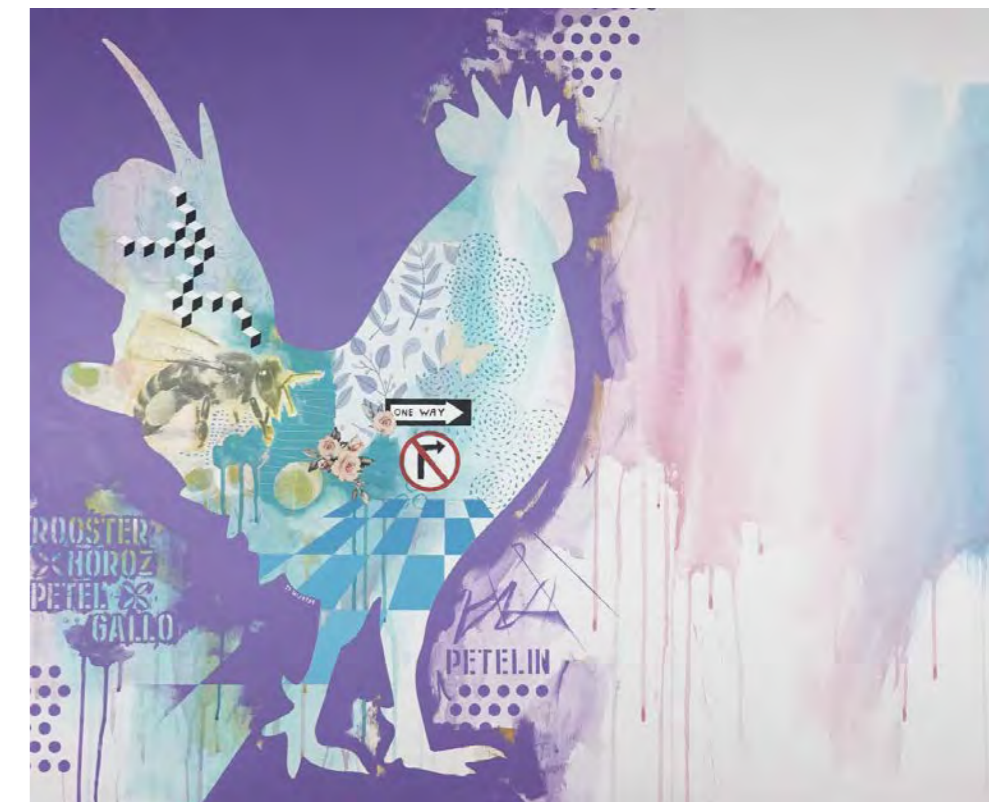

My artistic life is regularly supported by many print and TV media.

I live and work at the Art Homestead Pengallus.

My work is exhibited in international private collections.

Alejandro Cortes

MEXICO

Alejandro Cortes is a figurative painter born in 1990 in Mexico City where he resides at present day. his work focuses on studying reality and its shapes and forms to be able to explore and build dialogs with his internal self-using figurative painting as its mediator. His approach is combining the rigid and strict rules to represent shapes that exists in our world with the immense and ethereal possibilities of the imagination, he thinks this way he gains the skills required to scout and investigate himself and his internal world. He has been conducting these expeditions; for around fifteen years, he also teaches and have done so for six years approx., he has found in teaching the best way to help and empower others. He knows this from experience since he has been a student all his life too, his learning has been electing ranging from Guanajuato University in visual arts to personal learning from other artists like Alejandro Decinti and Oscar Villalon both his most impactful teachers and strongest mentors. He has also been influenced by a variety of authors such as Carl Gustave Jung or Joseph Campbell, based in all this he aspires to tell a story that contains more stories and which meaning may be completed with personal experiences of spectators through psychological projection, like tarot cards. He opened five solo exhibitions between 2012-2019.

Dorry Spikes

UK

Raised in rural West Wales, Dorry Spikes illustrated travel books bilingual for fifteen years before choosing to focus on making more self-directed prints, drawings and paintings. Dorry completed the Royal Drawing School 'Drawing Year' scholarship in London in 2017. She has attended artist residencies in Italy, the USA and Wales. Her current working process is influenced by language, place and memory.

"When I take the time to draw a place, I become deeply immersed and connected - every sense is heightened and I feel closely held by the place that holds my attention. I am drawn to depicting the vulnerability of humans in nature - call and response, expanse, hot dust, dancing trees. I am interested in how the Welsh notion of hiraeth influences my recollection of place. I make memory drawings and paintings that try to recapture the sensory immediacy of my outlook as an itinerant in unfamiliar surroundings. Othering' potential implicit in the outsiders' gaze makes me uncomfortable. My drawings wrestle with an inability to turn away, they are songs of devotion and non-belonging."

Mario B. Carrizosa

MEXICO

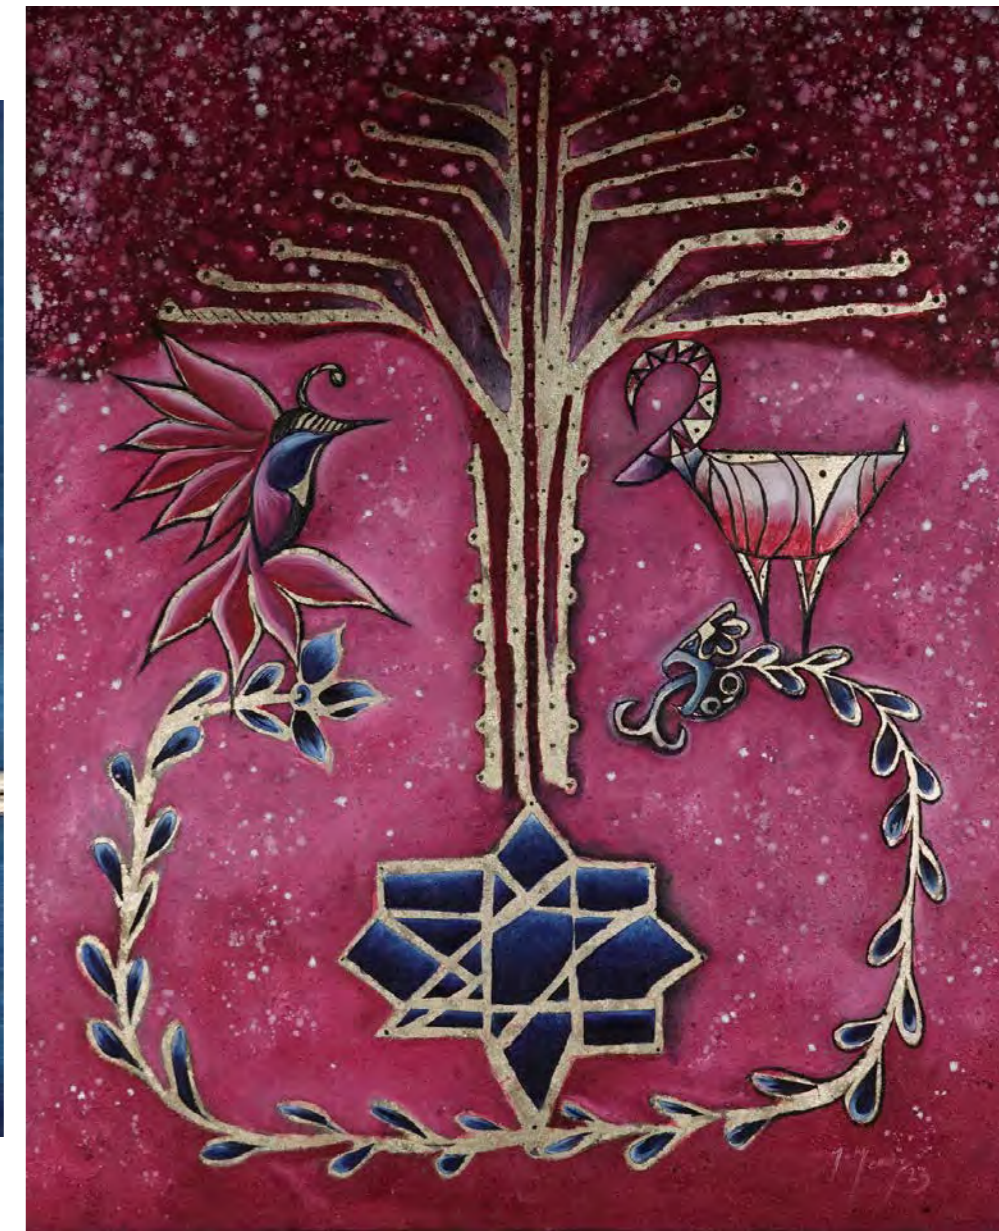

Born in the Oaxacan Mixtec region in 1975, Mario B. Carrizosa has reached a purification of plastic elements in his work that allows him to express himself on canvas and other media to propose a well-defined visual poetic.

His work insists on fantastic landscapes whose main characters are birds, insects, and two-horned animals in whose figures the deer, the antelope, certain goats and elephants are blended. Large trees with red or blue leaves dominate his canvases, under which birds, insects or imaginary animals are sheltered, accompanied by suggestive geometric designs reminiscent of esoteric symbols. Such symbols may also evoke the notion that home can be nomadic as in the case of beings who carry their homes with them.

The matteric composition of this painting is strengthened by the careful handling of figurative elements, whose sharpness is emphasized by the richness of textures and subtle details that give depth and consistency to this meticulous certification of a pictorial technique that is on the rise.

Peter Liew

MALAYSIA

Peter Liew is a full-time fine artist born in 1955 in Perak, Malaysia who has been in the art scene for over four decades. His medium is thick impasto oil on canvas and his instrument of choice is the palate knife, with blades that reach up to nearly a foot long.

Peter Liew is a graduate and a former lecturer at the Malaysia Institute of Art. With his past entrenchment in academia and commitment to art as a full-time artist, Peter Liew demonstrates a great usage of art theory, philosophy, and technique with his art works.

Themes of his artwork include natural heritage, cultural/architectural heritage and, most recently, life heritage (portraits). The common ground for Peter Liew's subjects is capture and extraction. He is fascinated with subjects that have the quality of age and beauty (conventional or non-conventional), subjects with element(s) that he sees value in capturing. Using his own creative process of extraction, he removes the element(s) and expresses it at his own leisure by breaking its form and using a mix of colors borrowed or ones that he substitutes with his own. With such a complex process Peter Liew's artworks look distorted and abstract up close but sharpen into focus and recognition as one is further removed from the piece.

Peter Liew has exhibited his art works locally and internationally.

My work is characterized with the use different media. I do sculpture, graphic, painting, fresco, and ceramics.

An idea created with different materials becomes firm and rich. Thus, it evolves in the best way, and I can express myself completely.

Often my work becomes a subject of discussion which makes me glad proving I have reached my goals.

I am interested in conventional genders and forms of expressions as well as philosophical, mythological, visionary, or simply life themes. They are present in my work mostly as a subtle detail or at times they directly show their story – innocently or dramatically. How ever I am trying to show something new and different from all I have done so far.

I use oil and acrylic paint as well as watercolor. A fundamental technique in my graphic is dry needle. In sculpture I use welded iron which does not exclude the use of additional metals or any other material. I am always open to try something new if I believe it will be helpful for the accomplishment of my idea.
